

Cindy Simmons is the Associate Director of UC Center Sacramento (UCCS). UCCS is a system-wide experiential learning program for undergraduate students across the UC system. UCCS students intern at the State Capitol, state agencies, and in various non-profit organizations within the Sacramento policy community and complete academic course work while at UCCS. The Center also engages in fostering public policy research and provides a bridge between UC faculty research and the Sacramento policy community. Cindy oversees the Center's experiential learning program, policy engagement activities, and serves as the chief operational manager for the unit. She holds a Bachelor's Degree in Political Science from UC Berkeley and a Master's Degree in Higher Education Administration & Policy from Harvard. Prior to her role as Associate Director for UCCS, Cindy spent over 15 years at the UC Davis campus working in academic departments and organized research units. Most recently she served as a Chief Administrative Officer in the UC Davis Division of Social Sciences working with the Departments of Communication, Linguistics, and Political Science.
