Planning is just being finalized and by the time most of you read this update you'll be in San Francisco! The UCSF speakers, which are planned to present will give you an overview of our leadership, research and education.

Exciting new building development at UCSF Mission Bay – The UC Board of Regents have approved plans for three new UC San Francisco building projects, including a new neuroscience building on the Mission Bay campus as well as a new psychiatry building and student housing in the nearby Dogpatch neighborhood.

Two of the projects approved by the UC Regents expand on UCSF's position as a national center for excellence in neurosciences and mental health that encompass clinical care, research and training. The largest project is the Joan and Sanford I. Weill Neurosciences Building, made possible by a landmark \$185 million gift made last year by the Weills to establish the UCSF Weill Institute for Neurosciences. Another key investment is the UCSF Child, Teen and Family Center and Department of Psychiatry Building, funded by a \$50 million anonymous donation announced in 2015 that will provide mental health services to Bay Area adults, children and families.

The third project, a graduate student and trainee housing complex on Minnesota Street, will advance UCSF's efforts to provide more affordable housing options to offset the soaring cost of living in San Francisco.
